High Street win for betting firm

Council refusal overturned

NEWMARKET'S 12th betting shop is set to open this year after a successful appeal to the Secretary of State.

Forest Heath District Council rejected Paddy Power's application to turn the premises at 96 High Street into a betting shop in June, but the company successfully appealed against the decision and planning permission has been granted.

Paddy Power is likely to open for business at the site of the former d2 store at the start of December.

It was ruled that while the change of use will mean a one per cent increase to 33 per cent of primary shopping frontage in non-retail use – this is still shy of the 35 per cent maximum suggested in emerging policy.

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

Richard High, the inspector appointed by the Secretary of State, wrote: "With regard to the number of betting offices, the planning system should not seek to limit competition and it is for the market to decide how many outlets for a particular service a centre can support."

Forest Heath District Council has been ordered to pay Paddy Power the full cost of the appeal because the inspector found "unreasonable behaviour resulting in unnecessary expense" had been shown.

The inspector found the council had refused the bookmakers planning permission because the development would mean "an excessive proportion of non-retail uses" in a part of the town, whereas the inspector argued the policy

Six duck races were held at New River for visitors of all ages on Saturday.

"It was a good advert because you could hear the china constantly being smashed so people were gravitating toward that corner."

A harvest market on Saturday featured bric-a-brac and fresh produce from the allotment society go to good homes.

Jan Lovegrove, who co-organised the event with Jenny King, said: "It went absolutely splendidly."

Scarecrows and decorated bicycles festooned the church for the traditional harvest service on Sunday which was followed by cream teas.

The event raised just over £2,000 for Christian Aid and the church.

Racecourse B2B event is proving a big draw

STANDS at Cambridgeshire's premiere Business to Business exhibition are being snapped up quickly.

The Cambridge B2B exhibition, organised by the Weekly News's sister title the Cambridge News, will see scores of the region's top companies come together in Newmarket on Tuesday, September 27 to share their ideas, communicate their business to owners, directors and entrepreneurs, and attend informative seminars.

The event is already proving extremely popular, with 80 of the stands at the event having been taken so far, leaving only 12 still available.

Stand start at £295, and will provide a unique opportunity to connect with other business people and get ideas to grow or improve your company.

The event is free to attend for visitors, who can look out for an opportunity to source new suppliers, check out the competition, network and be inspired.

Free seminars by experts on topics such as the economic outlook for the region, social media and search engine optimisation will run throughout the day.

The event will run from 10am to 5pm at the Millennium Grandstand at the Rowley Mile Racecourse, Newmarket.

For more information and to download a booking form, go to www.cambridge-news.co.uk/Cambridge-B2B-Exhibition.

You can also call Maria Briggs on (01223) 209817, or email her at m.briggs@cambscci.co.uk.

John set to take the plunge with Channel challenge

Channel swim: part of John Creek's training is swimming a mile every morning.

A GUTSY swimmer hopes to fulfil his lifelong ambition of crossing the English Channel next year.

John Creek, who works in Newmarket, has been swimming in open water lakes for several months to prepare for the 19.6-mile challenge from Dover to Calais.

The fire and safety manager, of Wordsworth Avenue, St Neots, will swim front crawl wearing only goggles, trunks and a swimming cap when he sets off between August 8 and 16.

He must make the attempt during this period to coincide with a suitable tide and good weather conditions.

Only one out of six people who attempt the feat make it across, but John says he is "confident of success".

The 44-year-old said: "Ever since I made the decision to swim the Channel early this year, I have been training hard.

"I swim about a mile first thing every morning as well as other training sessions on top of that. I have also been doing swimming in Histon Lake with a triathlon group.

"This is something I've always wanted to do and after putting it off for a long time I thought that now I'm in my 40s I should really do it before it's too late.

"I have set myself four goals for the challenge. To finish it, to swim it under 20 hours, 15 hours and 12 hours. Hopefully I can make number four.

"It's about 19.6 miles across but the route works in an 's' shape so it's more like 25 or 26 miles."

John is now looking to raise money for a charitable cause in the St Neots area.

All Channel crossing competitors must be registered with the Channel Swimming Association and be accompanied by a safety boat.

Captain Matthew Webb became the first person to achieve the feat back in 1875 – making it across in under 22 hours.

Since then 866 people have completed the challenge, including Little Britain star David Walliams who in 2006 became the 731st person to swim from England to France.

To contact John about his challenge, phone (01480) 351176.

Charity was a huge help for baby Mia

Girl born with cleft palate

THE DJ dad of a baby girl with a cleft palate is organising a Halloween Horror Ball to raise money for the charity that has helped his young family.

Baby Mia was born 14 weeks ago with a cleft palate, a gap in the lip or mouth that arises when the face of a baby developing in the womb does not join up properly.

She will be having an operation on her lip to improve the condition on October 12.

James Norman, Mia's father, regularly DJs at house music nights in Cambridge as part of the HouseOlogy group and will be holding the event at the city's Anglia Ruskin University.

James, 35, of Croft Road, Newmarket, said: "Mia's mum Sam and I found out about the cleft at an early scan and we were devastated. We didn't know anything about what it was, what was involved or how bad it was going to be.

"The doctors told us to look into the Cleft Lip and Palate Association (Clapa), and it made us realise we were not alone.

"They have been absolutely brilliant. It was like a community and we could speak to people who have gone through the same thing, and they made us realise it wasn't so bad."

One of the major difficulties that children with cleft palates have is with eating and drinking. Clapa offers a feeding support service, and it helped James and Sam with specialist bottles and assisted feeding.

James said: "The other DJs and I have been thinking about holding a ball for a while, and we decided it would be great to raise money for Clapa to thank them for everything."

The HouseOlogy Halloween Horror Ball will be held at student venue The Academy at Anglia Ruskin on October 29 from 9.30pm-3am.

James will be DJing at the event alongside the three other HouseOlogy DJs

Lopez, Mr Fella and Goski.

There will also be three other top DJs, a 30ft projection screen and drinks deals at the bar.

Tickets are available from the website www.wegotickets.com/event/133322 and cost £10, or £8 for students. £1 from every ticket sold will go to Clapa.

Dynamite blown up at RAF Lakenheath

MORE crystallised dynamite has been discovered at RAF Lakenheath.

A cordon was established following the discovery of the explosives during a routine safety inspection on the base on Tuesday.

Controlled explosions to dispose of the dynamite took place between 4pm and 7pm that day.

The operation was set to continue between 7am and 9am and possibly between 11.30am and 2.30pm on Wednesday if any of the dynamite remained.

A spokesman said: "Residents in the local community may hear occasional noises during these periods."

"Flying operations at RAF Lakenheath will not be affected by the detonations."

Around 40 sticks of crystallised dynamite were found on the base and disposed of in July.

Asda in call to local charity groups

A SUPERMARKET is calling for local charities and organisations in need of support to step forward.

Newmarket's Asda store in Studlands Retail Park, which opened in July, will be allocating money from the chain's charitable foundation to local groups who could do with a helping hand.

Tom Younger, the store's deputy manager, said: "As part of our commitment to supporting the communities in which we operate, we're keen to help worthwhile causes in the local area."

"We want to hear from organisations and individuals who can demonstrate how they are helping locally and why they need our help. I'm sure it will be a tough task deciding which charities we are able to support."

Staff at the store will be in charge of choosing which local projects receive the funding.

Applications should include how much money the community work, project or organisation needs from the Asda Foundation and why it needs it. Details should be handed in to store before Monday, October 10.

Man needs treatment after bungalow fire

A FIRE in a bungalow on Monday left its occupier needing treatment for smoke inhalation.

Crews were called to the end-of-terrace property in Beaverbrook Road, Newmarket, shortly after 1.50am and found it was heavily smoke-logged.

They put out the blaze and ventilated the house, and gave the resident oxygen therapy. Three dogs also escaped safely.

Burglars flee with rings and medals

MEDALS, watches and jewellery were stolen from a bungalow in Mildenhall on Tuesday, September 13.

The burglars broke into the Raven Close home between 7pm and 9.30pm and made an untidy search of most of the rooms.

They took jewellery, including a large number of rings, a gold necklace and bracelet set and several earrings, as well as a jar of loose change and a bank book.

Some of the medals the burglars took had been engraved.

Call Mildenhall Police on (01284) 774100, quoting the reference MH/11/2016 if you can help.

Tributes paid to racing stalwart

TRIBUTES have been paid to former Newmarket trainer Michael Jarvis, who died on Tuesday at the age of 73.

Mr Jarvis, pictured, had suffered from ill health in recent years, undergoing heart surgery and having treatment for prostate cancer.

He leaves a widow, Gay, and three daughters, Sarah, Lisa and Jackie.

The son of a former National Hunt jockey, Mr Jarvis turned his hand to training having ridden three winners himself.

He became head lad to Towser Gosden (John Gosden's father) in Lewes and stayed for another two years when Gordon Smyth took over after Gosden's retirement.

In 1968 Jarvis set out on his own as a salaried trainer to David Robinson at Carlburg Stables in Newmarket, moving to Clarendon Stables seven years later and a year later on to Pegasus Stables. But it was at Kremlin House where he enjoyed his greatest successes.

Carroll House won the Irish Champion Stakes and Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe in 1989, Eswarah won the Epsom Oaks in 2005, Amerat landed the 1000 Guineas in 2001, Holding Court won the French Derby in 2000 and the brilliant Rakti claimed a host of big races between 2002 and 2005, including the Champion Stakes, Prince Of Wales's Stakes, Queen Elizabeth II Stakes and the Lockinge.

However, last season when illness took hold, he handed over the reins at Kremlin House to his assistant Roger Varian, who described him as a "wonderful man" as well as a "great trainer".

Mr Varian said: "It's a terribly sad day. His achievements and racing exploits go without saying, but first and foremost he was a wonderful man, a true gentleman and, I imagine, a great husband, a great father and a good friend to many."

"He happened to be a great racehorse trainer as well, but first and foremost he was just a wonderful man."

Jockey Philip Robinson, who was employed by Mr Jarvis for a hugely successful spell, said: "It's really heartbreaking. I was trying to get to see him at the weekend, but I was informed by Gay that he was in a bad way."

"All you can say is that he was a very, very nice man. In all the years I've had anything to do with him I've never known anybody say a bad word about him. That, for me, sums it up."

Mick Kinane rode Carroll House to his big victories and credited the horse and trainer with launching him on the world stage. He said: "He was a thorough gentleman and such a lovely man. It's so unfortunate that he didn't get to enjoy his retirement."

Veteran Newmarket trainer Clive Brittain, who now runs the Carlburg Stables where Jarvis began his training career, said: "He was one of life's special people."

"I've known him for many years and we were always pleased for each other when things went right and sorry when things went the wrong way. He'll be sadly missed because he was so loyal to everybody."

Last leg for planning appeal

LORD Derby's appeal against the refusal of planning permission to develop land in north-east Newmarket has resumed for its final week.

The Earl of Derby has taken his fight to overturn the refusal by Forest Heath District Council of plans to build up to 1,200 homes and other facilities on his land at Hatchfield Farm to a planning inquiry, where he is being opposed by Save Historic Newmarket, Forest Heath District Council and Tattersalls group.

Three weeks of the inquiry took place in July. It resumed on Tuesday and will end tomorrow after dealing with issues including the discovery of badgers on the site.

School's caterer cooks up success

CHEVELEY Primary School's caterer has won a county-wide award for her work.

Rosina Stoneham, school caterer at the C of E primary, has been named Cambridgeshire catering services caterer of the year for 2011 by Cambridgeshire County Council.

Staff and little ones at Cheveley Primary School were asked to explain what made Ms Stoneham special and her nomination, as well as the others received for school caterers across the county, were judged during the summer holidays.

Julie Zak, the school's headteacher, said: "The response from the children and staff was overwhelming and showed how appreciated Rosina is and how she goes the extra mile for them in her work."

"She supports those staff and children with special dietary needs and always encourages the children to try different foods."

Ms Stoneham introduced a weekly lunchtime award to reward a youngster from each year group who is helpful and well-mannered and Mrs Zak said Ms Stoneham is open to new ideas and tries to tie meals in with events taking place in the school calendar, such as organising a picnic on sports day.

Mrs Zak said: "Rosina produces on average 51 meals a day, working on her own, and up to 80 meals on special days. We are all delighted by the award and appreciate her hard work and commitment."

Both women have been invited to receive the award at a ceremony at Shire Hall on Wednesday, September 28.

Silks inspire crest quest

Resident artist sets herself a challenge

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

A NEWMARKET artist hopes her creations inspired by racing silks could be taken up as a modern-day crest for Newmarket.

Paula Wilson, based in Newmarket, has created a series of four designs, one depicting jockeys in racing silks, and the others less obviously showing the colours of silks associated with Newmarket.

The designs have been transferred onto mugs and cards for sale in the National Horseracing Museum, where she has been based as a resident artist on Thursdays for the last few weeks.

She said heraldic designs had conferred identity in the past and she hopes to create something similar for Newmarket, as well as creating visually pleasing designs.

She said: "The whole thing has been designed as a heraldic type of design. I'm trying to get the people of Newmarket to have an identity they can all appreciate."

Mrs Wilson created the designs after setting herself a task when her son, George, now 17, fell ill, and was encouraged by Janet Anderson, a neighbour who works for Pegasus Stables.

Mrs Wilson said: "I'm an art teacher and an artist in my spare time, and my son became ill just over four years ago with ME chronic fatigue syndrome. I have been at home having to look after him, as he has been terribly ill, and I had to find something to do."

She decided to give herself a project like she would for a class of students and set about getting to know the area she had only recently moved into. She came across the racing silks and the idea grew from there.

She said: "I started trying to put them together in a visual way, which was a long challenge. I had been doing it for two years by the time the competition came up for Lexington."

Mrs Wilson won the opportunity to fly to Lexington, Newmarket's twin city in Kentucky, to paint a horse with her design.

Following the trip, she was approached by Marion Green of the Newmarket Retailers Association, who invited her to pitch her ideas for products to promote the town to the Strictly Come Newmarket panel, and she was awarded prizes including business and financial advice.

She said the meeting with Mrs Green had convinced her to take the designs more seriously and she got to work developing the products.

Road trip experts put town antiques shop in spotlight

A NEWMARKET antiques shop is to be splashed across our screens in the spring on an episode of a BBC2 show.

James Lewis, an expert on Antiques Road Trip, descended on Treasures in Rous Road last Wednesday to have a rummage around in the hope of finding a good bargain.

Both he and Anita Manning, a fellow antiques expert, arrived in the town complete with their trusty vintage Volkswagen Beetle convertible on the hunt for antiques.

Mr Lewis said: "It has a great reputation, Newmarket, but its reputation is more for horses than antiques, so it would be nice to see if we can raise the antiques profile to match the horses."

"If this little shop is anything to go by it will be interesting - it has got some good little bits and bobs."

Patrick Cowell, 33, the owner of Treasures, said: "What a lovely experience it was having the BBC and the Antiques Road Trip team in the shop for the day, and we are looking forward to seeing it aired in spring 2012."

Mr Cowell said Mr Lewis had been interested in a few pieces in particular, including a 19th century Worcester bowl, a piece of cake from William and Catherine's wedding in April and a cigar box.

But, despite spending more than two hours poring over the shop's wares, Mr Lewis left empty-handed.

The Antiques Road Trip experts are tasked with scouring shops for interesting finds using starting budget of £200 which they try to increase through buying and selling items at auction.

The expert to raise the most money will be crowned the winner and the proceeds levied during the show will be donated to Children in Need.

Last Wednesday's filming started in Needham Market before their arrival in Newmarket and the experts took their search to the Cambs Antiques Centre, the Hive and Gabor Cossa Antiques, all in Cambridge, the following day.

Schools nominate pupils to help open new Strictly stores

RESPONSES are pouring in from schools keen to nominate pupils to take on a starring role in Newmarket retailers' Strictly Open event.

Seven shops will have opened by the time of the town's celebration day on Saturday, October 15, as a result of the Newmarket Retailers' Association's Strictly Come Newmarket competition to fill empty units.

The event is being staged to introduce the town and its new arrivals to each other and celebrate the success of the competition, which saw would-be entrepreneurs pitch their idea for a new business to a panel of 'dragons'.

Members of the retailers contacted local schools to ask them to nominate a student to enjoy some star treatment on the day.

The youngsters will be given a medal and goody bag and start the day with breakfast at the Bedford Lodge, before enjoying exclusive access to the zoo by the Clock Tower Roundabout. At least one child and an adult will then open each shop.

Five of the schools invited as well as a church group have said they are keen to get involved, one school has declined and others have yet to respond.

Mick Jefferys, assistant principal at Newmarket College, said they had asked to put two pupils forward: Marie Avis, 15, of Newmarket, and Brandon Charlesworth, 14, of Moulton. He said: "It's a school policy to be involved with the community and every opportunity that arises we try to be involved."

Brandon had entered the retailers' competition himself with a pitch for a young men's clothes shop.

Richard Goss, a member of the Newmarket Retailers' Association, said: "It was very brave of him to put himself forward and I believe he equipped himself very well."

First look at revamped hall

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

RESIDENTS flocked to have a look around Newmarket's King Edward VII Memorial Hall at the weekend.

The doors of the hall were flung open following the official opening ceremony on Friday and members of the public were invited in for a tour of the refurbished facility.

David Webb, vice-chairman of the Memorial Hall Regeneration Committee, who was among those showing people around the venue, said all of the comments he had received had been positive and added one lady was so thrilled with the look of the new building that she made him a cup of tea in the new Memorial Hall kitchen.

Cllr Keith Bovill, Newmarket's mayor, cut the ribbon outside the entrance to the hall alongside Louise Gosling, of Tesco, one of the organisations which had given money to the £1.1m project, and guests enjoyed refreshments in the hall.

Pictures: David Johnson 769800/767062.

In his speech at the opening, Cllr Bovill said: "The town council is delighted to have completed this major project on behalf of the Newmarket community."

"It has been a long and arduous road getting to where we are today and we should recognise the perseverance and dedication of town councillors and officers both past and present who have worked tirelessly in achieving this positive outcome for the town.

"The main focus when starting out on the project was to create a modern and welcoming community facility with improved accessibility for our residents. This has been achieved with the addition of a new two-storey extension which includes new toilet facilities, kitchen, bar area, passenger lift and meeting rooms."

He hoped the extension of the council chamber and the relocation of the staff offices to the ground floor would encourage more people to come to council meetings.

Speaking after the opening, Cllr Chris Turner, chairman of the committee said: "I'm absolutely delighted that town councillors, council staff, project team and builders have worked so hard to create such a beautifully refurbished memorial hall, especially after Forest Heath refused us any financial support."

He said it was "absolutely brilliant" they had completed the refurbishment £100,000 under budget. He said staff had suffered after moving in before the hall was as ready as had been hoped, but added August is a usually a quieter time for council business and everything had come together.

For more information on the hall, which can be hired for events, visit www.newmarketvenues.co.uk.

Drop-in session for masterplan

VILLAGERS can have their say on the Burwell masterplan, which will act as a 20-year vision for sustainable growth, at a drop-in session on Saturday.

The event is being organised as part of the issues-stage public consultation on the masterplan, which will run until the end of the month.

It will take place at the Gardiner Memorial Hall between 9.30am and 3.30pm.

Maps and displays about Burwell will be available to view and people will have the opportunity to write or draw their ideas as well as to have a word with members of the working party about the village's future.

Cllr Peter Moakes, the working party's chairman, said: "For the Burwell masterplan to succeed it needs those who live, work and care for the village to have their say on how it should develop in the future. We should not and will not impose plans on Burwell which have not been developed with and by the local community - this is why the drop-in event this weekend is so important."

"If you have any ideas of what the village and the surrounding area needs to be successful in the next 20 years we would really like to hear from you and develop your ideas for the benefit of Burwell."

Work on the masterplan will be carried out during the autumn and is set to conclude next year.

Members of the public can attend the next meeting of the working party at the new Mandeville Hall in Burwell on November 3.

The community questionnaire on the plan is available at www.eastcamb.gov.uk and in the Burwell Bulletin; alternatively email masterplan@eastcamb.gov.uk, phone (01353) 665555 or write to The Grange, Nutholt Lane, Ely, CB7 4EE.

Paddy Power wins fight for shop should have been applied to Newmarket as a whole and if it had been, Forest Heath would have granted permission and no appeal would have been necessary.

Marion Green, of the Newmarket Retailers' Association, said it was a "smack in the face for the town", but said they will work to make the town the best regardless of the decision.

She said: "Newmarket is bigger than Paddy Power. We will be good losers, we will rise above it but it just goes to show that democracy does not work in this country because the people didn't want it and the town council didn't want it and the district council didn't want it, but we have had it inflicted on us by someone who knows nothing about this town."

But Darren Haines, a spokesman for Paddy Power, said the arrival of the betting shop would bring five or six full and part-time jobs to the town and fill one of the town's empty shops.

He said: "No-one wants empty outlets on a street - it's the worst thing of all for how a street looks when outlets are closed down and boarded up."

He said customers would receive a better service because of the competition represented by Paddy Power and it could be the case that rivals offering a worse service would be competed out of business in time.

CCTV appeal after two hurt in crash on A14

A DRIVER failed to stop after two people were seriously injured in an accident on the A14.

The collision happened on the westbound carriageway at Rowley Mile, near Newmarket, at about 2.40pm on Saturday.

It involved a black Ford Fiesta, which left the road and collided with a tree, and a 4x4-type vehicle, pulling a trailer with a boat on, which failed to stop.

The Fiesta was being driven by an 18-year-old man from Ipswich who suffered minor injuries. Two girls also travelling in the vehicle, both from Ipswich and aged 18 and 16, suffered serious but not life-threatening injuries.

Police have released a CCTV image of the vehicle which failed to stop, left.

Pc Ian Swales, from March roads policing unit, said: "I am keen to speak to the driver of the vehicle pulling the trailer as they might have important information about how this crash happened."

Anyone with information should contact Pc Swales on 0345 4564564.

Plan for new constituency makes sense

Sir, like Cllr Tom Kerby, of Newmarket, I welcome the Boundary Commission's proposal to include Newmarket in a new Newmarket and Ely parliamentary constituency ('Boundary bid sparks shock', Weekly News, September 15).

I regard this as great news, for it is a fact that Newmarket (presently partly in Suffolk) is surrounded by Cambridgeshire. The parts of Cambridgeshire that surround Newmarket are in East Cambridgeshire District Council's area. It all makes sense and, believe it or not, there was an old 'Newmarket Division' of Cambridgeshire.

MPs elected for the division were Sir George Newnes, Bart, who won first in 1885; Colonel Harry McCalmont, who won first in 1895; Sir Charles Rose, who won a by-election in 1903; Mr George Henry Verrall, who won in January, 1910; Sir Charles Rose, who won again in December, 1910; and Mr John Denison-Pender (later Lord Pender), who won a by-election in 1913. The seat was done away with in 1918.

Mr Verrall, who lived at Sussex Lodge, Fordham Road, Newmarket, was the last Newmarket MP to live in Newmarket. He died there in 1911.

To add a personal note, at the 2010 General Election (when I was the independent candidate in South East Cambridgeshire), I found it irritating having to travel through parts of what was then 'West Suffolk' to get to the parts of Newmarket that are in Cambridgeshire and on to the lovely Cambridgeshire villages surrounding Newmarket.

Newmarket is in the district. Most probably Ely would not want Newmarket's parking charges but may envy our wheelie bins and their ecological advantage over plastic refuse bags.

I don't care what my address is

Sir, at the risk of stirring the pot further, I must say I totally agree with every word in the recent letters from Cllr Tom Kerby (East Cambs) regarding county boundaries.

The county boundaries in the Newmarket area have been ludicrous since year dot. Successive Boundary Commissions have failed to grasp this so-called 'nettle' when given the opportunity.

As a native of Suffolk, although not local, I remain loyal to that county but care not a jot if my address becomes Newmarket, Cambridgeshire.

It's time to go the whole hog

Sir, how very significant that, having been tasked by the Government with reviewing constituency boundaries, the Boundary Commission for England has come up with proposals to merge Newmarket with Ely.

This would surely be an ideal opportunity to sort out the county border once and for all and move Newmarket into Cambridgeshire.

It is clear Forest Heath District Council is now on the back foot. It is widely recognised that this local authority is officer-led. The role of democratically-elected members is to formulate policy; officers are employed to implement that policy.

I wonder how many Newmarket councillors who serve on Forest Heath District Council, representing the Conservative party, are beginning to realise the benefit of joining East Cambridgeshire District Council, particularly now that the Boundary Commission has made its position clear.

With the Government intent on reducing the number of Parliamentary constituencies and adamant that there should be an equal number of voters in each of them, it is obvious that the Boundary Commission's recommendations will eventually

Total switch may not follow

Sir, Cllr Tom Kerby is perhaps precipitate and presumptuous in suggesting that the proposed Parliamentary boundary changes may be a first rung to realisation of his masterplan to pluck Newmarket from Suffolk and wedge it into Cambridgeshire. County, district and town boundaries do not necessarily follow the Parliamentary lead. While the creation of a Newmarket and Ely constituency might seem to separate Newmarket from Suffolk, the corollary is that it divorces East Cambridgeshire from urban Cambridge and the rest of Cambridgeshire. Rural East Cambridge could thus equally become part of Suffolk County and Forest Heath District.

I notice that the Ely Weekly News refers to a possible Ely and Newmarket constituency but the article there does not mention Cllr Kerby. Possibly the majority of East Cambridgeshire residents do not realise that a small part of

It's a golden cricket summer

Sir, having faced the disappointment that despite having a great season my own club missed the Two Counties Cricket Championship by a couple of points, I would like to extend my clubs' congratulations to our near neighbours Lakenheath Cricket Club, Tuddenhams Cricket Club and Worlington Cricket Club, who all won their respective divisions of the same league. It was a "golden summer" for the West Suffolk clubs and we ourselves have the consolation of retaining the Suffolk Cup.

Parking permits could save workers cash

Sir, as you may or may not be aware, the top level of the Guineas car park is now under the control of the Newmarket Retailers Association on a permit-only basis, available to town centre workers. The cost benefits of this scheme are:

- £1.75 per day long-stay car parks in town.
- 71p per day under the six-month permit scheme.
- 68p per day under the annual permit scheme.
- The saving over a six-month permit against long-stay car park costs would be £162.24.
- The saving over an annual permit against long stay car park costs would be £333.84.

If you are paying for a three-hour ticket in the short-stay car park and then placing another ticket in your vehicle without leaving the car park (which is illegal and Forest Heath District Council are currently investigating) the costs are outlined as below.

- 90p every three-hour ticket paid for.
- £2.70 per day 8am-4pm.
- 71p per day under the six-month permit scheme.
- 68p per day under the annual permit scheme.
- The saving over a six-month permit against short-stay car park costs would be £310.44.
- The saving over an annual permit against short-stay car park costs would be £630.24.
- The other benefits of having a permit are:
 - Increased customer relations with local residents over parking in local streets.
 - There were no provisions for long-stay parking in this car park previously.
 - Meter feeding (as outlined above) is illegal.
 - Convenient parking in close proximity to your place of work.

- This permit can be used whether you are at work or not.
- The permit can be transferred between two vehicles which allows shared usage.
- There is an increased level of security for your vehicle on the top of the car park due to CCTV coverage.
- A guaranteed parking place.
- The obvious cost benefits outlined above.
- The ability to pay on a quarterly payment plan.
- Increased freedom from the short stay car park time constraints (three hours).

Pupils help in store's opening

CHILDREN from a Mildenhall primary school took centre stage at the official opening of a supermarket in the town.

Pupils from St Mary's Primary School helped Steve Smith, store manager at the Co-operative Food shop, cut the ribbon to re-launch the Kings Street store last Thursday.

A donation of £200 was given to the primary school to thank the youngsters for helping out.

Mr Smith said: "As a community retailer it is appropriate we involve the community in our special events and we are delighted that the local primary school is playing a central role in the re-launch of our store."

The store closed on Sunday, September 4, and reopened on Thursday morning following its £500,000 revamp.

It has been redecorated and given a new layout as well as new fittings, fixtures and a new kiosk and the Post Office inside the shop has also been redecorated and given a new fascia.

The store's opening hours have been extended to between 7am and 10pm seven days a week.

Broadband boost – but not in Burwell

WITHIN days of Mildenhall qualifying for super-fast broadband, it has been revealed a Burwell street has the 50th slowest broadband speed in the whole of the UK.

BT has announced Mildenhall will be among just 12 exchanges in the county to benefit from the company's £2.5bn super-fast broadband programme.

Matthew Hancock, MP for West Suffolk, said: "This is fantastic news for Mildenhall. Super-fast broadband will now be available from next year to nearly 5,000 homes and businesses in and around Mildenhall. This will help unlock potential for prosperity and make life much easier for businesses and homes alike.

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

"I have been campaigning for better broadband access across Suffolk with fellow MPs, and this is an important step forward for Mildenhall."

But less than a week after the market town received the good news, research carried out by uSwitch.com in the six months to August has identified the 50 streets with the slowest broadband speed – two of which are within the vicinity of Newmarket.

The figures, which were based on more than 1.5 million speed tests through the website, revealed residents of Bloomsfield, Burwell, have to put up with the 50th slowest broadband speed in the UK, with a download speed of just 0.454 megabits per second.

Those living in North Road, Lakenheath, saw their street in 48th place, with an even slower speed of 0.445 megabits a second.

However, Pat Kilbey, chairman of Burwell Parish Council, said she was not aware of the broadband speed being a particular problem in the village and said the internet of some in Burwell is provided by fibre optic cable which means they are not in the equation. She said: "So far, I have not heard anybody comment about it at all – I have never had complaints about it."

However, the Government announced last Wednesday it has awarded Suffolk £11.68 million to roll out its Suffolk Local Broadband Plan to bring super-fast broadband to rural parts of the county starting next year.

Speaking about the Government's announcement, Mr Hancock said: "This will finally make super-fast broadband a reality for rural parts of Suffolk, where businesses and families have long been frustrated at the slowness of their connection."

Survey aims to improve street

LITTER, street grime and bins were among the issues highlighted during an 8am walk along Newmarket High Street.

Groups of three from the town council's High Street Regeneration Committee were tasked with carrying out a survey detailing their impressions of the town at different times of day before the next meeting tomorrow.

The committee aims to create a document which would give direction to the council's efforts to rejuvenate the High Street.

One of the groups, which was made up of Andy Yallop, the chairman of the Newmarket Retailers' Association, and Simon Batey, strategic tourism development officer at Forest Heath District Council, and the Weekly News, took to the streets last Friday morning.

Cable ties and the remnants of posters wound around lampposts, litter, including cigarette ends, as well as mismatched and aging bins and benches were highlighted by the group.

Mr Batey said: "We said the town is on a busy road and of course a lot of that street grime attaches itself to buildings; unfortunately it detracts from the buildings."

Another issue raised was the effect on the view down the high street of shop signs – but the overall impression was of a town was a positive one.

Mr Yallop said: "We have picked a lot of positives out about why Newmarket is a lovely place. We don't want to be negative all the time but we do want to improve it."

He said the committee was a good example of people getting together with different views.

He added: "It's a positive and a negative that the High Street is so nearly there in some aspects. It's just making sure we look at the bin issue, at the seating issue, keeping the main street tidy and clean."

Mr Batey said: "The thing is to make the best use of what we have got and attract the public and retailers."

Jobseekers flock to recruitment drive

Picture: Keith Heppell 769623.

A NEWMARKET hotel was filled to the rafters with jobseekers attending a recruitment open day last Thursday.

The free four-hour event at the White Hart Hotel in High Street saw people looking for work come along to discuss their options with staff from Crem Recruitment.

The visitors, many of whom arrived with CV in hand, were also able to register for work with Chloe Garrett, a recruitment consultant and Newmarket account manager at the agency.

Newmarket has no recruitment agency of its own and the Haverhill-based agency recently held an open day in Saffron Walden, another town in the same position.

For more information on Crem Recruitment, which can offer positions in fields including engineering, sales and marketing, industry and HR, call Miss Garrett on (01440) 708833 or visit www.cremrecruitment.co.uk/index.html.

Bollywood bonanza

A LOTTERY-funded grant has brought subsidised Bollywood dance classes to Mildenhall.

Discounted Just Jhoom! classes are being offered to people aged between 14 and 25 from the town as well as from Newmarket.

Hayley Crawford, a Just Jhoom! instructor, has been awarded the lottery-funded grant by Sportivate, a lottery-funded programme designed to help young people get involved in sports.

She said: "Just Jhoom! has a growing following across the UK and I hope that people will come along and try out this latest trend in exercise. It's great fun." The dance fitness classes involve Indian dance moves and yoga-style exercises set to Bollywood music.

The six-week course is taking place at Mildenhall's Dome Leisure Centre on Tuesday afternoons between 4.30pm and 5.30pm. It started on September 13, at a cost of £2 per session or £10 for all six classes.

To book a place on the classes, call Hayley on (01638) 721522. For more information on her other classes in the area, visit www.justjhoom.co.uk.

Table-top equine sale

EQUINE enthusiasts are invited to a table-top sale in Newmarket's Memorial Hall on Friday, September 30. Many of the sellers at the sale will be raising funds for charities including Animal Care in Egypt.

Entry to the sale, which is taking place between 7pm and 8.45pm, is free but donations to the Animal Health Trust are requested.

Tables for sellers cost £7.50. They must be booked and paid for in advance and a few are still available. For more information, contact Colleen Salmon on 07724 069766, or email colleensalmon@btinternet.com.

Just Champion

It's 30 years since Bob Champion conquered cancer and went on to win the world's most famous steeplechase. And, earlier this year, history almost repeated itself as he prepared for another trip to Aintree. The former jockey tells his incredible story to ALICE RYAN.

Winning ways: Grand National winner Bob Champion devotes most of his time to raising money to beat cancer

Picture: David Johnson 761834.

BOB Champion answers the door with a big smile and a firm handshake. He's looking especially smart – suit, crisp shirt, pink tie – in readiness for racing this afternoon: as is often the case, he's off to Newmarket to entertain a group of race-goers.

"I've got to give a bit of a talk," explains the former jockey, leading the way into the kitchen and flicking on the kettle for coffee. "It's funny: even after all these years, I don't mind telling the story. It's a great memory to relive. And, let's face it, things could so easily have gone the other way..."

It's 30 years since Bob made sporting history. In 1981 – having battled back from advanced testicular cancer, which many thought would kill him – he won the Grand National on Aldaniti, a horse so blighted by injury that he too had brushed with death. Immortalised in Champions, the 1984 film starring John Hurt, the iconic tale of triumph over adversity is known the world over.

To mark the 30th anniversary of his National win, Bob had pledged to ride again at Aintree this year. As if history was repeating itself, the 63-year-old nearly didn't live to see the day.

"I had a heart attack a few weeks before the National," explains Bob, ever matter-of-fact. "I knew straight away. It was the middle of the night and I said to Jeanette, my partner, that I had a terrible pain. She felt my head and it was all clammy. Next thing the ambulance was there, thank God. Otherwise I might not be here."

Bob, who lives in Cheveley, ended up having emergency surgery and spending the best part of a week in hospital. But he was determined to make it to the National, on a stretcher if need be.

"When I was discharged, the consultant said 'I don't want you getting on a bike for two months'. It was three weeks before the National by then. When the day came, I dosed myself with painkillers and got on the horse. I can't say it wasn't painful – the bruising was horrendous – but I wouldn't have missed it.

"I went back for a check-up and the consultant said 'I thought I told you not to get on a bike for two months?'... I replied 'Yes, but you said nothing about getting on a horse'."

Along with fellow veteran jockey Jonjo O'Neill, Bob led out the runners and riders for the inaugural Bob Champion Aintree Legends Charity Race. Marking the anniversary of his National win, the race was held in aid of the Bob Champion Cancer Trust, which has raised an incredible £12 million for research into male cancers since the 1980s.

"When I was diagnosed with testicular cancer in 1979, I was given a 35 to 40 per cent chance of survival," says Bob. "Now, as long as it's caught early, there's a survival rate of 95 per cent. That's amazing.

"Now we're turning our attention to prostate cancer. For every £30 spent on breast cancer – don't get me wrong: that money should be spent, and a lot more besides – only £1 is spent on prostate. Yet prostate has become the most common cancer of all in men, overtaking lung cancer."

Bob was diagnosed aged just 31. A successful jump jockey, with a long string of winners to his name, he was at the peak of both his career and physical fitness.

Plucking up the courage to call the doctor, Bob was immediately referred to the Royal Marsden in London. Two operations later, he was told the bad news: he had cancer, it had spread and, without treatment, he had a mere eight months to live.

Prescribed 'a real cocktail' of drugs, Bob began an eight-month slog of chemo. Describing himself as 'stocky', the jockey had always battled to maintain his riding weight of 10st 8oz; after the chemo, he weighed in at just 8st 7oz.

"My God, I was sick 24 hours a day," says Bob, pulling a face. "The chemo in those days was pretty barbaric. At one point, I nearly gave up. Then I went for a walk around a kids' ward. I saw all these children who were just getting on with the chemo, not making a fuss. And then I thought I'd better get on with it too."

Bob credits trainer Josh Gifford with giving him hope. "He came to see me in hospital, when things were at their absolute worst, and told me my job would be waiting for me when I got better. He's since told me, in his heart, he didn't think I was going to make it. But hearing that gave me hope."

All Bob's hard work soon began to pay off. Just six months after completing chemo, he rode in his first race. In Champion style, he won.

And Bob's luck held: over Christmas 1980, he rode nine races – and had seven wins, two second places. "It wasn't quite a Frankie," laughs Bob. "I had seven winners over three days; I think it must have been a personal best."

With his success – both on the racecourse and the cancer ward – came increasing media attention, and Bob was already working on his autobiography, assisted by his friend, racing journalist Jonathan Powell, when he rode to victory in the National. "Jonathan said he couldn't believe how confident I was," laughs Bob. "I really thought it was just a formality. I'd ridden Aldaniti six weeks before at Ascot and he was so impressive, he never came off the bridle. I just knew he could do it."

Crossing the line was, says Bob, almost surreal. "It was such a moment. It's hard to explain: it's like your life isn't your own for a second or two."

Winning the race turned Bob, who was subsequently made an MBE, into an international celebrity. With first the book and then the film version of his life, he flew all over the world to attend signings and premieres. "I did 103 long-haul flights in one year. I never knew what time zone I was in."

Not long after the film premiered, Bob retired. Keeping his weight down had become an all-consuming concern: "I was spending 25 hours a week every week in the sauna," he admits. "The treatment had changed my metabolism, I think."

These days, he devotes most of his time to work for his charity, the Bob Champion Cancer Trust.

"I've got no plans to retire," he says. "I can't think of anything worse. I've got to keep raising money, keep flying the flag for the Trust. My aim is for a total cure to be found – and I really do believe it will happen one day."

Parking offer by council

DRIVERS can enjoy some extra change in their pockets when taking up a car parking space in Newmarket. Spaces with controlled access in the off-street pocket car parks in All Saints Road, Queen's Street, Granby Street and Rous Road are being offered to new customers at a discounted rate of £250 a year plus VAT. The new price, which can be paid by direct debit, will be available to existing customers from their renewal date.

Cllr Nigel Roman, chairman of the community services committee at Forest Heath District Council, which is responsible for the car parks, said: "We hope that having a guaranteed parking space close by will take away that stress for the individual and help to alleviate on-street congestion." For more information, visit www.forestheath.gov.uk, or the council's property services team on (01638) 719349.

The hour-long talk at the Lakenheath reserve will start at 11am. Admission is £4 for adults and £2 for children. RSPB members and Wildlife Explorers can get in for half price. To book, on (01842) 863400.

Kit donation means kids' team is now match of the day

Kick-off: Scarlett Ward and Kiran Kaur, from Kismet, with Simon Finding and the team.

A NEW football team is celebrating after its young players were handed a new team strip.

The generous donation from Kismet Therapy Rooms comes after more than a year playing in mismatched hand-me-downs.

When Arlie Finding, now 8, went along to the Newmarket Town Youth Football Club signing-on event in July 2010, he was told all of the teams were full.

Adrian Waslin, the club's treasurer, who already managed two teams, responded to hoards of children desperate to pull on their football boots by setting up a new under-8s team, on the understanding others would soon take over. The team started training in August and by September, Arlie's dad, Simon, 38, started helping out.

Mr Finding, of Freshfields, Newmarket, said: "It's nice to get involved when we are there every Saturday anyway."

By February, he had gained a coaching qualification and took over as manager with two helpers, Nigel Hall and Wayne More.

The youngsters played in mismatched kit and funds were tight. Mr Finding said: "Last year we had hand-me-down kit, we didn't have any socks, one of the grandads donated money towards the socks."

Mums, dads, friends and relatives helped fundraise with raffles and donations. Sponsorship was sought and the youngsters took part in the club's fun run, raising just over £900.

At the start of June, Kismet, in Newmarket High Street, sponsored the Newmarket Town Whites, now an under-9s team, giving them £330 to buy 14 kits in royal blue and yellow, which Mr Finding said gave them an identity of their own.

He said: "It's fantastic that a newly-opened company in Newmarket has pledged to sponsor a local football team and hopefully we will have a good relationship with Kismet.

"I know from other managers it's quite difficult to get sponsorship because there are so many teams within the area. It's quite difficult with the way the current climate is, not many people are willing to pay out that sort of money."

"Kismet seemed nearly as excited as the team were when the players found out they were getting a sponsor."

They have bought water bottles and bench jackets with fun run money and have some left over.

Mr Finding said: "It's nice to know we have got money to fall back on so if and when we need to purchase stuff we are able to without worrying about where it's coming from. Obviously this season we

Spotlight on childhood

A PRIMARY school is inviting the community in to discuss what makes a good childhood in the area.

Burrough Green CE Primary School will be holding a Good Childhood Conversation from 7pm on Thursday, September 29, in response to the findings of an inquiry into what makes a good childhood in the UK, which involved more than 30,000 people, including nearly 18,000 youngsters.

Jo Petty, of the Children's Society, which commissioned the Good Childhood Inquiry, will be introducing questions to the discussion then talking about what people feel they want to do for their community following the debate, such as fundraising for a particular charity or broadening the discussion to involve more people.

Jim Davis, of the Children's Society, said: "Childhood today is more complicated than ever before. Modern society offers more opportunities and material wealth than for previous generations but many young people also face a range of issues such as obesity, anxiety, broken homes, peer pressure, stress from school and exams alcohol and bullying."

"Holding a Good Childhood Conversation is a fantastic way for our community to get together, discuss the local issues and talk about some positive solutions to make childhood better for all the children and young people in our area. We invite you to come along, get involved and help us keep the conversation going."

Burwell Fox awaits your company

FOR a wonderful evening of decadent Mexican food, visit a historic local pub in Burwell.

The Fox, a 300-year-old building, has been owned by Bob and Louise Taylor for the past six years.

The couple sell a wide range of real ales, as well as traditional bar food from Tuesday-Saturday at lunchtimes, often featuring great deals on a Thursday such as a roast and dessert for just £6.95.

However, the Fox differs to other establishments thanks to its popular Mexican evening fare, which includes spicy treats such as enchiladas, fajitas and burritos. Bob, the pub's chef, has developed each dish from authentic recipes, adding his own unique twist, which has kept the restaurant busy since day one. There are also delicious steaks which are sourced locally, and plenty of tequila to wash your meal down – 34 varieties in fact!

That's without even mentioning the specials board, which often features fresh fish, seafood and more obscure Mexican fare. Bob says: "We love the simplicity of quality Mexican food. Fresh ingredients, simply prepared to suit the English palette are our constant bywords. The menu represents the wider known, expected dishes, but to keep it interesting our specials board often offers a surprise or two."

The wood panelled bar has a cosy feel, especially with the colder months looming when the fire will be lit to warm customers.

Looking ahead to Christmas, The Fox Mexican Restaurant has proved to be a popular party destination for those work groups that want something different.

Bookings are being taken for that period, so if you fancy a Christmas fiesta, call today!

Hundreds of families tuck into food festival

A MASTERCHEF finalist headlined a Chippenham food festival at the weekend.

Dr Tim Kinnaird made it into the top three of the competition in 2010, and took a break from his patisserie and macaron business in Norfolk to spend some time at the Regional and British Producer Fayre at La Hogue Farm.

The event on Saturday and Sunday drew a crowd of almost 6,000 people who came to see more than 70 producers and farmers, including chocolate and fudge makers and quail and chicken keepers, who were offering guests the chance to taste their goods and learn a little more about how they were made.

Chris Reeks, owner of La Hogue, said: "It showcases all the best local producers and it's great customers can get to meet the guys that are producing this stuff."

Among the stars of the show was a Classic British Mini which Chris Evans, the television and radio star, used to own.

It was filled with packets of bags of crisps for a competition to see how many bags it could hold.

Charity foots bill for vandal attack

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

A BICYCLE was hurled through the window of a charity shop causing more than £1,000 damage – which the organisation will have to pay for.

The broken purple mountain bike was smashed through the glass of the Crack On! charity shop in All Saints Road late on Saturday or early the next morning.

Mark Byford, co-founder of the charity, said: "The next-door neighbours heard it – they thought the bottle bank had been tipped over in the car park. He said the house shook."

Crack On!, which encourages young people to volunteer and helps them increase their self-confidence and pursue their ambitions, had to pay £250 just to have the smashed window covered over and the new window will cost £700, in addition to VAT.

Following the damage, Crack On! discovered its insurance only covers the building itself, while the glass comes under the category of fittings and fixtures, so the money will have to be drawn from the charity's own funds.

The £1,090 it will cost would have paid for a year's worth of quarterly coaching seminars for up to 100 young people a time, but he added it will not stop the charity from holding the events.

Damage: Mark Byford and Jane Pattison outside the shop, where the window has been boarded up. CP:

He said: "When you are looking at what we are trying to achieve from the charity's point of view, it diminishes what we can do with the money coming in when we have got £1,000 coming out probably just because somebody had too much beer on a Saturday night."

But Mr Byford said they had to make the best of a bad situation – the Crack On! team are getting the bike repaired and plan to auction it off on Facebook auction to raise money for the new window.

He added they had also put pictures of the damage up on Facebook and had as a result sold a dressing table visible inside the shop.

One man even came into the charity shop and gave the team a £50 donation towards the new window after hearing about the damage.

Jane Pattison, finance manager for the charity, said: "The local people's reaction has been superb in their support of what we are trying to do."

A police spokeswoman confirmed that a window was smashed at a shop in All Saints Road between 12.15am and 12.30am on Sunday.

Our special little boy

Kaiden Davey, at 7, can't walk or talk, needs help to eat and drink, sleeps as little as two hours a night and suffers regular violet seizures. Alice Ryan talks to his parents.

KAIDEN Davey is a very happy little boy. Sitting on the sofa, clapping his hands and waving his feet, he's all smiles and giggles. His good humour is contagious: when he laughs, you can't help but laugh with him.

"When he's well, he's like this all the time: constantly smiling and laughing to himself," says Lina, Kaiden's mum. "People often ask if I feel angry about having a disabled son, but I don't. In fact, I feel blessed.

"The way we see it, Kaiden is special. Yes, he has a strangeness about him, but I think that's quite lovely. And he's such a loving child.

"You know he's had a nice day if, when we collect him, he takes your face in his hands and sort of squeezes your cheeks. I think it's his way of saying 'Thank you'..."

At seven years old, Kaiden can't walk or talk. He's still in nappies and needs help to eat and drink. And he has complex health problems: diagnosed with severe epilepsy and registering on the autistic spectrum, doctors believe he has an incredibly rare condition – so rare, they have yet to pinpoint it.

"At his worst, he was having a major seizure every half an hour," explains dad Kevin. "He'd vomit violently every time, so we'd just get cleaned up and he'd go into another seizure. "Seeing his little body go through all that – he goes completely blue and convulses – is hard to describe..."

"There was a time when we thought Kaiden would never be able to do anything other than lie on his back. But he now makes a lot more eye contact, he can sit up, he can shuffle around on his bum, he can make noises to let you know when he wants something.

"He's come a long way and we're really proud of him."

Kaiden's health problems date right back to his birth, at five weeks premature, in January, 2004.

Lina, who has two grown-up children – Stacey, 23, and Louis, 21 – from a previous relationship, explains that Kaiden was a much-wanted baby.

"Kevin and I got together when Louis was about 2½. We really wanted to have a child together and I had several miscarriages before Kaiden, so when he arrived he was extra-special, in a way. Having had two babies before, I did notice that Kaiden moved oddly inside me; that something was different, but I couldn't quite put my finger on it."

The Daveys, who live in Fulbourn, were on a shopping trip to Ikea when Lina's waters broke. Rushed into hospital, doctors managed to stave off full labour for three days – but then Kaiden arrived five weeks premature, weighing in at 5lb 6oz.

Mum and baby spent the next 10 days in special care. Although medics reassured Lina that, despite his being prem, all was well with Kaiden, she remembers feeling very anxious.

"I tried to feed him and he just wouldn't latch on. Instead he'd make this yapping noise and shake his head, like he was angry.

"I'd look around the ward and see babies born earlier than him making better progress. Eventually I broke down and cried.

"A nurse came to sit with me and said the problems were most likely down to him being premature. I'd never had a prem baby before, so I didn't know what to expect."

For the first two weeks after being sent home, Kaiden did nothing but sleep. But then he started screaming: he would literally yell round the clock, all through the night.

"No, we had no sleep," admits Lina, 40, with a wry smile. "But we haven't had much sleep ever since, to be honest. You just learn to cope."

Having not had a fit for a week or so, Kaiden had a cluster of seizures which were ongoing for two days

Loving son: doctors believe Kaiden has an incredibly rare condition – so rare, they have yet to pinpoint it.

inbetween moments of raging behaviour and self harming. After five big ones in a row he went into Addenbrooke's and had to be sedated.

"Knowing the nurses were there, and that he was under sedation, I actually managed to sleep for a full eight hours – I totally relaxed."

Kaiden's development during his first year was very slow. "Every time we raised a concern, it was put down to him being premature," remembers Kevin. "But when he had his eight-month check we said we wanted to be referred."

Given an appointment at the Child Development Centre, Kaiden never made it – because two weeks before the assessment, he had his first major epileptic seizure.

"We'd been out for the day," remembers Lina. "At that stage, he was totally silent most of the time: he liked to lie on his play mat and look up at this chandelier we had, flapping his arms and legs. I put him down on the floor and he started making this noise. My first thought was 'Oh good!' – then I turned round and saw him. He was having a full seizure; he was completely blue."

Blue-lighted to Addenbrooke's, doctors ran some tests and then allowed Kaiden home. But he had a second fit the next day, then a third the day after that. Subsequently admitted to hospital, Kaiden had a barrage of tests, including a painful lumbar puncture. Although epilepsy was swiftly diagnosed, the cause could not be established.

Discharged after two weeks, Kaiden was prescribed anti-seizure medication.

"Unfortunately it didn't make any difference: it got to the point where he was racking up 50 major seizures a day," says Kevin. "Then he went on to stronger medication, which helped with the big seizures – but he was having hundreds of little ones, including absences where he just goes blank."

Kaiden also has serious issues with his digestion. Possibly connected to his epilepsy, he suffers with constipation so severe it once blocked his entire system – so faeces started backing up and coming out of his gastroscopy tube.

"He used to hate being touched, even having his hands held or putting his feet on the floor. And he'd lie sort of crumpled up. What we didn't realise was that his system was totally blocked up," Lina explains.

"He was given an adult enema and the poo was pouring out of him for two and a half hours."

"Sometimes he'll suddenly go in the night and we get up to find him and his bed covered in it," adds Kevin, 37. "He's on all kinds of laxative medication, but the consultant says he's the most constipated boy he's ever seen."

Even now, Kaiden only sleeps for about two or three hours a night. He is very wakeful and active all night long and, prone to banging his head, has to sleep in a specially-made cot bed, padded on every side.

But, despite all his trials, there are many sources of happiness in Kaiden's life – not least going to school. A pupil at Granta, the school for children with special needs in Linton, he has loved it from day one.

"The way the staff talk about him is so lovely. He's an affectionate boy and he's always cuddling the teaching assistants," adds Lina.

Kaiden also enjoys being out and about in the fresh air. Thanks to staff at Thriplow-based agricultural company KWS – who heard about Kaiden through a family friend – the Daveys now have a specially adapted bike: fitted with a state-of-the-art ChildPod at the front, it means Kaiden can now enjoy going for a bike ride.

KWS raised some £2,000 to fund the bike, by running a bake sale and a sponsored tractor pull during the Open Farm Sunday celebrations at Russell Smith Farms in Duxford this summer.

"It's brilliant," says Kevin,

"and we are so grateful to everyone who helped raise the money. To see Kaiden's smile when he can feel the wind on his face is lovely."

The Daveys admit that there have been some low moments. "You get some funny reactions from people," admits Lina. "Once an old man came up to me in the supermarket and said 'What's WRONG with your son?'. I opened my mouth to reply – we don't mind people asking about Kaiden: we're not embarrassed by him, we're actually quite proud – and he walked off. I followed him and said 'Excuse me, but you asked a question – aren't you at least going to listen to the answer?' And he was really rude to me."

"At the other end of the spectrum, you get the lovely people. Another elderly gentleman stopped me in Tesco and said 'I hope you don't mind me talking to you – I often see you in here with your son and I just wanted to say I think you're a lovely mum'. I was very touched by that."

"I do try not to think about the future," admits Kevin. "Generally we cope really well, but if I stop and think about what the future holds it does pull me down for a while."

"When you leave your kids in the world you expect them to be grown up, looking after themselves, maybe having kids of their own. But we know we're going to have to leave Kaiden in the hands of other people – that's the worst thing."

Doctors still can't get to the bottom of Kaiden's condition. Samples of his DNA have been sent to geneticists in Paris, Zurich – the world over. But nobody can establish exactly what's wrong.

"We do get a little bit sad sometimes," admits Lina. "And there are still days when I feel very tired. But I don't let it get to me: there's no point. I know it's going to be like this for the rest of my life, so I've got to get on and deal with it. And when I see Kaiden as he is now – so happy he's laughing out loud – it makes it all feel worthwhile."

Building firm takes worry away

TJD: Established in 2002 and developing fast.

TJD Building Contractors, based in Isleham, has a strong team of 15 employees, not to mention numerous industry contacts, who can see to any domestic problems, from a door which needs hanging, to entire high-quality new build homes.

The business was established in 2002, by Tim Drayton, and has grown into a professional building contractor by working with many different architects and clients, treating each client as an individual.

The quality of workmanship and professional care TJD Building Contractors brings to its clients has been recognised by the Federation of Master Builders, who awarded it the Master Builder of the Eastern Region Builders Award in 2008, and a highly commended award in 2010.

The company's hard work has also been rewarded in the recent weeks with the recognition of the Investors in People award, which is reassessed every three years to check that businesses fulfil their commitments to training their staff, and that all staff are treated fairly.

TJD Building Contractors is a family-run business, which brings a friendly atmosphere to all sites but with a professional service, who will go that extra mile.

The reason for the firm's rapid growth is its emphasis on employing trained people in each and every trade – from decorating to brick laying – meaning your job can be managed by one team, rather than having to outsource across different companies.

Tim says: "We can come and do the complete job and

Beavers hit road

BEAVERS – instead of the famous cartoon hedgehogs – were kings of the road after a visit from a Mildenhall PCSO.

PCSO Tim Hartup, of the Mildenhall Safer Neighbourhood Team, paid a visit to the young members of the Red Lodge Beaver Group last week to speak to them about road safety and speed awareness.

He said: "We had a short discussion about what the Beavers thought the meaning of the words 'speed', 'fast' and 'slow' were, followed by a demonstration of how we carry out speed checks and the equipment we use."

Spreading the word: PCSO Tim Hartup with the Red Lodge Beaver Group.

CP

"Green Beaver Linda Arnold kindly drove her vehicle within the residential speed limit to illustrate speed of vehicles and how the speed radar gun worked.

"The intention of the talk was to get the youngsters to think about and begin to appreciate the speed of road users whether they be cars, lorries, bicycles or even scooters."

Have a say on spending cuts

HAVE your say on where Suffolk County Council spends its money – and makes its savings.

The council has seen a 28 per cent reduction in the amount of money it receives from the Government, higher inflation and has reported a greater demand for services, all of which mean the council needs to save £50 million in the next two years – on top of the £43 million it has saved this financial year.

Public funding is required for county council services ranging from the fire service, child protection, road maintenance and adult social care.

Suffolk County Council has appealed for everyone living and employed in the county, as well as local businesses, voluntary organisations and district and borough councils, to give their views on where its £1bn budget should be spent.

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

Cllr Mark Bee, the council's leader, said it was important to find out the priorities of the people of Suffolk and the council's partners before the decisions on where to spend money and make savings were taken.

He said: "I can't pretend that difficult decisions won't have to be made. But I want to ensure that the choices we make reflect not just my views, or those of other councillors, but the values of the people we are here to serve."

Phase one of the consultation will continue until October 23.

The broad questions will focus on people's priorities and will ask which services they think the council should make savings on, which ones people would consider paying for and how they think efficiency savings can be made.

Budget-saving ideas will then be drawn up and the second phase will allow people to comment on them.

A series of events will be held in Suffolk during the second phase of the consultation, which will run from the start of November until December 12.

The council's scrutiny committee will have the chance to challenge the council and consider what is being debated during the process before the final budget is agreed by the full council on February 9, next year.

To take part, visit www.suffolk.gov.uk/wearelistening, fill in a form at one of the county's libraries and hand it in then and there, or post it to Budget Challenge, Suffolk County Council, St Peters House (CSD), Freeport Nat18364 Ipswich, IP1 2BR. Alternatively, phone (0845) 6031842.

It's all about the birds and biscuits

BISCUITS and blue tits will be on offer at Lackford Lakes on Friday, September 30.

The nature reserve is hosting a coffee morning in aid of Macmillan Cancer Support between 10am and 2pm.

Staff and volunteers at the nature reserve will create cakes and biscuits galore and there will also be a raffle, tombola and quiz sheets.

Visitors can also opt to take an hour-long guided stroll around the reserve with Paul Holness for £3, with the proceeds going to the Suffolk Wildlife Trust.

Phone (01284) 728706 or email lackfordcentre@suffolkwildlifetrust.org.

A gaming marathon!

A SIX-day gaming tournament for up to 128 people per session will be held in Newmarket in the run-up to Christmas.

The opening day of the tournament on Monday, December 19 will be held for video-gaming enthusiasts aged 7 and under.

The age limit will increase day by day and by Christmas Eve, only adults will be allowed to take part.

Newmarket's Memorial Hall will be littered with gaming consoles during the event, which has been organised by Racing Newmarket Football Club, a team made up of people working in the racing industry.

Howard Jones, organiser of the side, said: "I have always had the idea to do something like this because I don't think there is a gaming tournament in East Anglia."

"There are likely to be a lot of people who enjoy gaming in the town."

A winner will be crowned Newmarket champion for their age group at the end of each day and will walk away with a prize.

Tickets to take part in the event cost £3 and those who just want to watch others take the controls can enter for free.

Silver screenings

Cambridge Film Festival, which began last week, is one of the highlights of the British movie calendar and continues until Sunday with the usual mixture of classic revivals, eye-opening documentaries, TV favourites and innovative live events. Here are some of the remaining highlights. Tickets for all venues are available from the Arts Picturehouse Box Office on 0871 902 5720 (9.30am to 8.30pm) or at www.cambridgefilmfestival.org.uk

● Surprise Movie

Every year, the Festival teases film fans with a Surprise Movie. There's only one way to find out what it is – and that's to turn up on the night. Previous Surprise Movies have included Pixar's UP!, Burn After Reading, the UK premiere of A Cock and Bull Story and an exclusive preview of Pirates of the Caribbean. It always sells out, so book early. Sunday, September 25, 6pm

● Midnight In Paris

The festival has the honour of hosting the UK premiere of Woody Allen's new romantic fantasy adventure. Continuing the director's recent passion for all things Parisian, the film stars Owen Wilson, Rachel McAdams, Marion Cotillard and Adrien Brody in the story of a wealthy Hollywood scriptwriter who finds himself seduced by the French capital. Based on anyone we know, Woody? Friday, September 23, 8pm

● Tyrannosaur

Actor Paddy Considine impressed audiences at Sundance with this feature-length directorial debut, earning himself the Word Cinema Directing Award in the process.

Tyrannosaur takes an unflinching look at one man's submission to rage and violence – emotions that threaten to consume him.

UK premiere. Saturday, Sept 24, 8pm, Sunday, September 25, 7.30pm (Cineworld)

● Red, White and Blue

This stunning, complex and original psychological drama evolves into a thought-provoking revenge tragedy and culminates in Shakespearean levels of violence. The story's heavy reliance on coincidence and irony can be easily overlooked in light of the powerfully sympathetic characters, in particular the soft-spoken warhorse Nate (Noah Taylor) and Erica (Amanda Fuller), an uptight, loose woman with a ghastly hidden agenda.

Friday, Sept 23, 10.30pm, Saturday, Sept 24, 5.45pm

● Guilty of Romance

Last in cult director Sono Sion's Hate Trilogy (Love Exposure and Cold Fish), Guilty Of Romance bends genres such as film noir, melodrama, thriller and soft porn, telling the story of three Japanese women. Izumi, obedient but bored wife of a famous author, finds distraction in modelling naked, discovering secret desires and meeting shadowy people from the Tokyo Love Hotel red-light area – including literary professor Mitsuko who works as a prostitute at night (and becomes Izumi's dark mirror image). Intertwined is the story of female detective Kazuko, who finds a dismembered body near the hotel. As these Freudian-charged stories unfold, all grow closer together to culminate in a gruesome, phantasmagorical finale.

UK premiere. Thursday, Sept 22, 6pm (Cineworld), Sat, Sept 24, 10.45pm.

● Help

SKEETER (Emma Stone) is a southern society girl who returns from college determined to become a writer, but turns her friends' lives – and their 1960s Mississippi town – upside down when she decides to interview the black women who have spent their lives taking care of prominent southern families. Friday, Sept 23, 8.30pm (Cineworld), Sunday, Sept 25, 3pm.

● An American in Paris

GENE Kelly stars as Jerry

Mulligan, a struggling American painter, in this classic. When Mulligan meets a beautiful young dancer in Paris, complications arise when it turns out she's already engaged to be married. Winner of six Academy Awards in 1951, Vincente Minnelli's masterpiece is considered one of the greatest movie musicals of the 1950s. Saturday Sept 24, 3pm and Sunday, Sept 25, 2.30pm (Cineworld).

● All events take place at the Arts Picturehouse, 38-39 St Andrews Street, Cambridge, unless otherwise stated

Junction date

HARD-FI are heading for The Junction tonight. Their debut album, 2005's Stars of CCTV, sold more than a million copies and earned the band nominations for everything from the Brits to the Mercury Music Prize. Follow-up Once Upon A Time In the West also debuted at number one and now, after a three-year hiatus, the four-piece are back with Killer Sounds. Contact The Junction on (01223) 511511 / www.junction.co.uk for times and details.

Just like Judy

FOLLOWING a smash-hit run in the West End, the dazzling End of the Rainbow comes to Cambridge, revealing the heartbreaking story of Judy Garland's final days.

Tracie Bennett takes on the epic role of Garland as she struggles with drug addiction and the pressures of her latest comeback, as well as performing the star's most memorable songs. The show runs from Monday until October 1. Contact (01223) 503333 / www.cambridgearts.theatre.com for details.

Dark is the night

BASED on the classic children's book by Jill Tomlinson, The Owl Who Was Afraid of the Dark is a funny, gentle and reassuring production written especially for youngsters.

Join Plop the barn owl as he journeys into the night-time world of campfires, fireworks, starry nights and moonlit adventures in this new production from Blunderbus Theatre Company combining live music, puppetry and storytelling.

The show runs at The Junction, Cambridge, from Sunday until January 3. Contact (01223) 511511 / www.junction.co.uk for times and details.

HEY, MISTER DJ: Huw Stephens takes to the decks on Saturday at Ballare as part of the Propaganda gig.

Indie in the groove

FOR indie fans in Cambridge, pickings are pretty slim when it comes to deciding where to go for a decent night out. Your luck may be on the turn, however, thanks to the launch of a new club night at the newly-expanded Ballare.

From September 17, the club – fondly known as Cindies, and not, up till now, generally associated with the indie scene – will be hosting Propaganda, bringing music fans the best in cutting-edge new tracks and anthemic classics from resident and guest DJs.

Starting in a 200-capacity club in Bristol, Propaganda has gone truly global, filling clubs across the UK, Ireland and Australia.

To celebrate its Cambridge launch,

Propaganda has lined up some special guest DJs. The Vaccines will kick off proceedings with a DJ set on opening night, then Radio 1's Huw Stephens will take to the decks on Saturday.

The Guide caught up with Huw to find out more about what we can expect from his indie set.

Huw, what would you say is your ultimate Propaganda floor-filler track?

Blur's Song 2. An obvious classic of course, but a thrilling tune whichever way you look at it.

What gets you on the dancefloor?

A bit of booze and some Pulp.

If you could hit the dancefloor with anyone, alive or dead, real or fictional, who would it be and why?

I'd like to dance with Andre 3000 from Outkast on one side, Kylie on the other. I'd be happy with that. I'm not really a dancer though I must admit. Unless it's at a wedding. Or Propaganda – when no one's looking.

What else are you up to at the moment?

My Radio 1 show goes out Wednesday nights at midnight, with loads of the best new music on it. I'm on at the weekends too, 1pm-4pm, playing tunes and seeing what folks are up to on their days off. Swn Festival is coming up on October 20-23 in Cardiff with 180 bands playing. And I'm moving flat too.

What's your best DJing anecdote?

Getting 60,000 people to sing along with The Proclaimers' I'm Gonna Be (500 Miles) on the Reading main stage before Guns n Roses was a special moment!

■ Propaganda Cambridge, Ballare, Lion Yard, Cambridge. Every Saturday 10pm - 3am. Admission is £5 (£4 students and before 11.30pm).

Shakespeare – with strings attached

STAR-CROSSED: Romeo and Juliet at The Junction.

Picture LiquidPhoto.co.uk

MUSIC, magic, performers and puppets come together to give new life to the age-old story of Romeo and Juliet, showing at The Junction next week.

Focusing heavily on creative theatre making, imagination and vivid theatrical storytelling, Night Light Theatre Company set out to inspire, excite and entertain in this unique interpretation, which has a running time of just 75 minutes.

Even so, over the last two years the company has worked to try to make every element of the show unique and full of detail.

Every character over the age of 20 is portrayed by a puppet, appearing and interacting with the human cast throughout. Guns and knives are replaced by magical abilities, and light is used to represent the blinding power of rage.

Shakespeare's tale of lovers caught up in a bitter feud was one of his first published plays and has spawned many an adaptation, from operas to films. Today it stands alongside Hamlet as one of Shakespeare's most performed plays.

■ Romeo and Juliet, The Junction, until September 28 at 8pm. Tickets are £12 (£8 concessions) from (01223) 511511 / www.junction.co.uk.

The big film

WARRIOR certificate 12A 139m

TWO brothers go to war against each other in Gavin O'Connor's brutal story of redemption and self-loathing. Bone-crunching skirmishes become a vibrant backdrop to the potential reconciliation of the estranged siblings, one battling for his country and the other for his family.

Warrior puts these two male archetypes – the valiant soldier and the selfless father – in the fighting ring and witnesses the emotional fallout as the protagonists deal with their tortured pasts in the present day.

Marine Tommy Conlon (Tom Hardy) arrives home unexpectedly after 14 years of service, surprising his father Paddy (Nick Nolte), who has turned to religion to help him beat the bottle. Tommy asks his old man to train him for Sparta, a televised mixed martial arts fighting competition with the biggest purse in the sport's history. Paddy agrees, desperate to rebuild bridges.

However, the former marine isn't interested in playing happy families and Tommy chooses to fight under his mother's maiden name of Riordan to mean the connection.

Meanwhile, Paddy's other son Brendan

(Joel Edgerton) is struggling to make ends meet as a schoolteacher. The bank is threatening to take away his home so Brendan secretly fights in the backrooms of bars for money, keeping it a secret from his wife Tess (Jennifer Morrison).

Once the school learns of Brendan's extra-curricular activities the headmaster suspends him and the teacher's entire future rests on winning Sparta, putting him on a collision course with his hulking sibling.

Warrior talks tough and flexes its muscles impressively in the bruising fight sequences, but the script punches well below its class.

Characterisation is featherweight and Hardy and Edgerton, who have both bulked up for the roles, aren't given the material to deliver knockout performances. Nolte bares his soul in his few scenes and Morrison is similarly short-changed.

There is a clear narrative bias towards one of the brothers, making the bone-crunching histrionics of the final bouts a foregone conclusion before anyone has stepped into the ring.

Consequently, there is no dramatic tension and when screenwriters O'Connor, Anthony Tambakis and Cliff Dorfman do orchestrate one big reveal it turns out to be completely redundant, having no impact whatsoever on the fates of the central players.

The second reveal provides unintentional hilarity when the media unearths the truth at a critical juncture. Running time is excessive – the four editors should have thrown in the towel at least 20 minutes earlier.

Growing for grown-ups

by Hannah Stephenson

TV gardening guru Alan Titchmarsh is calling on all schools to get their grown-ups growing as part of a nationwide event organised by the Royal Horticultural Society, to be held across October.

Get Your Grown-ups Growing forms part of the RHS's Campaign for School Gardening, supported by Waitrose – a national initiative that encourages schools to create gardens, teach the skills of growing and in turn enable their pupils to learn outside the classroom.

Each October schools are invited to hold a Grown-ups Growing event so they can involve their local community to help develop the school garden. Grandparents, parents, carers and friends are invited to help.

Alan, leading supporter of the RHS campaign, explains: "It is no secret that school was never my favourite place and my interests lay outside the classroom, often in the allotment with my grandfather. But today it's a very different world.

"The fact that schools have really cottoned on to the benefits of gardening with their pupils is fantastic news, especially for children who are looking for different ways to learn, like I was.

"If we can encourage parents and the wider community to get involved with their school garden, then who knows, we might end up with a green revolution both at home and at school."

Activities suggested for event organisers include tool swaps, taste tests of produce grown in schools or alternatively locally-grown fruit and veg, a range of gardening classes and even a mini garden show. Schools with gardens can encourage adults in the community to help develop new areas such as a wildlife garden or help construct raised beds. A Get Your Grown-ups Growing event can also see adults passing on their gardening experience to children by helping them sow seeds, plant trees and assist in weeding. For schools without gardens it's the ideal opportunity to involve adults in the community from the beginning to establish some form of gardening facility in the school.

For both types of schools the event can even be used to raise funds through plant sales and raffles.

Entering its third year, Get Your Grown-ups Growing has developed from a small pilot project based in Yorkshire to a national success involving 1,000 schools. Of the schools that held an event last year, 74 per cent said it had increased their children's interest in gardening, while more than half reported an increase in adult support and adult interest in gardening. Jacky Chave, RHS strategic schools manager, says: "Having a school garden is a fantastic asset for teachers and pupils as it provides a multitude of learning opportunities, but we know it can take a lot of hard work to maintain.

"By involving parents and other local adults, through an event like Get Your Grown-ups Growing, we hope that school gardens will be looked after all year round and enthusiasm for gardening and growing will spread beyond the school gates and into children's homes."

The RHS hopes to see 2,000 schools register for this year's Get Your Grown-ups Growing event, double last year's figure. All registered schools will be entered into a free prize draw to win garden tools and materials.

To register, schools must sign up to the RHS Campaign for School Gardening via www.rhs.org.uk/gggg and click on the Get Your Grown-ups Growing button on the home page. Schools which register will receive a free support pack including seeds, event ideas, information templates, stickers and more. Each school can choose any date in October to hold its event and organise activities to suit its requirements.

Kia's used car scheme is 'now best in the industry'

KIA'S Approved Used Car Scheme has been recognised as the best in the industry having been crowned Used Car Scheme of the Year in the Auto Express Used Car Awards 2011 which were announced last week.

Auto Express praised Kia for going above and beyond normal approved used programmes with a number of customer benefits including its industry-leading seven-year warranty that is fully transferable to subsequent owners.

Approved Used Kias don't just get the balance of their manufacturer warranty. Instead, the warranty is topped back up to the full seven years meaning that an Approved Used Kia gets the same warranty as a brand new Kia.

It wasn't just the warranty that impressed them though. Explaining their decision, Auto Express commented: "Plus, you get 60 days or 1,000 miles in which to change your mind. Add to this two years of breakdown cover, seven days' free drive-away insurance and a useful online car locator, and you have a cracking approved scheme."

Commenting on the award, John Hargreaves, Kia UK's head of vehicle remarketing, said: "When we launched our Approved Used Car Scheme we set out to ensure it really did represent the best possible deal for customers so we're obviously very proud that this been recognised by Auto Express with this award.

"Resetting our pioneering seven-year warranty back to new when you buy an Approved Used Kia really differentiates us from other schemes – it means that a Kia could be under warranty for some eight and a half years in total. We believe this shows that our high level of confidence in the product isn't just limited to when a car is new.

"The strength of our Approved Used Car Scheme is also a key factor in the strong residual values we're achieving across our range," added Hargreaves.

Vehicles sold under Kia's Approved Used Car Scheme are up to 18 months old, with up to 18,000 miles, and come with the following benefits:

- Warranty restored to new –

Kia: Doing the business for used car purchasers with an industry-recognised scheme with vital benefits to customers.

- seven years or 100,000 miles.
- Two years European-wide Roadside Assistance
- Seven day drive-away insurance
- 60 day/1,000 mile customer exchange programme
- 88-point vehicle inspection
- Service history to

manufacturer requirements

- Provenance and mileage verification check

For further information about Kia's Approved Used Car Scheme, along with details about how to find an approved used Kia in your local area, go to www.kia.co.uk or telephone EMG Motor Group on 0845 126 4859.

Chevrolet Sparks up the Hollywood factor

The Chevrolet Spark: With film festival livery.

RUNNING until Sunday at the Arts Picturehouse cinema and across Cambridge city centre, the 31st Cambridge Film Festival showcases independent films from all over the world, and features new films, special guests and exciting events to suit film lovers of all ages.

Cambridge Chevrolet has loaned the festival team a Chevrolet Spark 1.0LS in Carbon Flash Black with a Sports Tag Kit for the duration of the event, to help them organise festival events around the city. The Spark 1.0LS has been decorated with the 'Cambridge Film Festival' logo.

This year's festival has received a record number of film submissions, including UK and World premieres, special seasons and new films from every corner of the globe. Feature highlights this year include the much anticipated film version of 'Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy', Nicolas Winding Refn's highly acclaimed action film 'Drive' starring Ryan Gosling, and Woody Allen's 'Midnight in Paris'.

Luke Gordon, franchise manager at Cambridge Chevrolet, said: "The Cambridge Film Festival is the third longest running independent film festival in the UK and as a company we have supported it for many years. This year is no different and we are very proud to be sponsors as well as offer one of our Sparks to help out with the different events going on all over the city."

The Chevrolet Spark is the perfect mini for city driving with a stylish edge, combining style and practicality with the latest in-car entertainment features. The Spark is available now at Cambridge Chevrolet in Trumpington from just £6,995, to book a test drive call (01223) 873673 or visit www.cambridgechevrolet.co.uk. Tickets for the Cambridge Film Festival are on sale now and the film and events programme is available on their website at www.cambridgefilmfestival.org.uk.

Don't miss Cambridge Saab's sale

THE team at Cambridge Saab would like to say "Den Svenska Salu Handelse" which translates as the Swedish Sale Event.

Yes, the Swedish Sale Event is coming to Cambridge Saab on Saturday and you'll be able to make astounding savings of the whole of the new Saab range. This event promises to offer terrific price reduction across the board on Cambridge Saab's extensive choice of Saab Approved used cars too.

So just how exciting are these deals going to be? Well there will be substantial savings of up to £8,000 on new, nearly-new and ex-demonstrator stock for this Saturday only. What's more, any new Saab car purchased on Saturday and registered before the end of September will come with three-year's FREE* servicing. Just think, no servicing to have to pay out for over the next three years when you buy a brand new Saab.

There are really strong savings available on the curvaceous new Saab 9-5 saloon and price reductions on the stunning Saab 9-3 Convertible and sleekly-styled 9-3 Sportswagon.

Maybe you are thinking of purchasing a used car. Well few manufacturers can match Saab when it comes to producing cars that last. Every model is carefully built out of high-grade materials while Saab's engines are known for their longevity and reliability. What's more, all Saab Approved used cars are covered by one of the best used car warranty programmes in the business.

Cambridge Saab's Swedish Sale Event allows you to purchase a Saab Approved used car and benefit from two-year's FREE servicing* but remember this deal is only available if you buy your used Saab from this Saturday, September 24 up until the end of this month.

Most used Saabs available at Cambridge Saab will still be covered by the balance of the manufacturer's three-year warranty but for those outside this period, a comprehensive 12-month/15,000* mile dealer guaranteed warranty will be provided along with highly attractive service offers.

Cambridge Saab's friendly sales team have access to a range of flexible finance options to ensure that buying a new or Saab Approved used car is easily affordable. Part-exchange deals are also very welcome.

Final preparations for the Swedish Sale Event are now under way at Cambridge Saab where you'll find the dealership awash with Sweden's national colours of blue and yellow. What's more, you can look forward to typical Swedish hospitality this Saturday, September 24.

Just think! You could have a beautiful gleaming Saab on your driveway for an incredibly low price and gain free servicing too. What's not to like? Call Cambridge Saab's sales team to find out more on (01223) 873660. Best of all, why not just turn up at the dealership this Saturday when you'll be given a warm Scandinavian welcome. You can find Cambridge Saab at 59/61 High Street, Harston, Cambridge CB22 7PZ.

Cambourne-based technology company, HiWave Technologies plc is recruiting engineers, FAEs and administrative employees.

The company, listed on the London Stock Exchange, designs and sells electronic and transducer solutions for sound and touch. It has operations in the UK and Hong Kong, and is respected globally for its innovative loudspeaker solutions that bring enhanced audio quality to mass markets.

Always on the lookout for creative talent to join our team of engineers and technologists, exceptional sales executives to help drive forward our business, and diligent, professional support staff to ensure the smooth running of our business, speculative CVs are always welcome.

We currently have eight specific opportunities to advance your career with us:

HiWave is recruiting...

Acoustics Engineer/Senior Acoustics Engineer

– based in our Cambourne, UK office and reporting to the Chief Technology Officer, this role is responsible for technology innovation in our range of top quality speaker drive units and audio transducers. Customer support will also be an important part of this role, helping our customers to get the best acoustic results when they design our components into their products. The ideal candidate will have at least 5 years' relevant audio engineering experience and will have a background in consumer audio products or hi-fi.

Senior Electronics Engineer

– based in our Cambourne, UK office and reporting to the Chief Technical Officer, this role will be responsible for development of reference designs that encapsulate and demonstrate the key benefits of the company's audio and haptics components. With at least 5 years' relevant electronic design experience, the ideal candidate will have previously worked at the forefront of new technology development. A background in audio or consumer electronics product development is desirable.

Electronics Engineer

– based in our Cambourne, UK office and reporting to the Chief Technical Officer, the ideal candidate will have between 1 and 5 years' hands-on electronic design experience, and will join our development team to create reference designs and evaluation systems for our audio and haptics components.

Field Applications Engineer, Asia

– based in our Hong Kong office, this role will deliver technical support to our customers in Asia. We are looking for a qualified electronics engineer with commercial experience, capable of working with our customers to give them market advantage by utilising our audio and haptics components. Travel to meet with key customers in China, Taiwan, Japan and Korea will be involved.

Field Applications Engineer, USA

– based in the USA or in our Cambourne, UK office this role will deliver technical support to our customers in North America and Europe. We are looking for a qualified electronics engineer with commercial experience, capable of working with customers to give them market advantage by utilising our audio and haptics components. Travel to meet with key customers in Europe, Canada and USA will be involved.

Sales & Marketing Assistant

– based in our Cambourne, UK office this role will support our worldwide sales team, including the representatives and distributors in various geographic locations. In addition, all marketing and sales collateral will be managed by this person, including the website content. We are looking for someone with experience in working in this area, but more importantly, have exceptional attention to detail and multi-tasking skills to support the sales and marketing team. The successful candidate will have good communication (verbal, written and interpersonal), presentation, administration and telephone skills, good business acumen and a willingness to learn.

PA to the Executive Management Team

– based in our Cambourne, UK office, this role will support the Executive Committee and the Board of Directors. Skills required for this role include tact and good judgment in confidential situations, an ability to interact with senior management employees at all levels, effective interpersonal skills, good oral and written communication skills, strong time management skills, an advanced ability to organise and manage their own time and to multi-task effectively.

Apprentice Technician

– based in Cambourne this role will support the Engineering Team in their creation of new technology, prototype's and sales samples. The applicant should be interested in becoming an audio, design, electronics or mechanical technician, and will be supported through Day Release and an in-house mentoring programme. The successful applicant will be motivated to gain a professional qualification, and eager to take on a variety of tasks in all disciplines of engineering.

All interested parties should e-mail their CV to hr@hi-wave.com, clearly stating the job title in the subject header.

Closing date for applications is Sunday 25th September 2011.

The first round selection and telephone interviews will take place between 26th and 30th September 2011. Formal interviews will follow between 10th and 21st October 2011.

>> Swimming:Winter warmer in a Masters class

NEWMARKET Masters racked up 11 gold medals, two silvers and two personal best times at the Barnet Cophall Masters. Peter Winter started the medal rush by claiming gold in the 50m breaststroke, trimming two seconds off his personal best, and then took top spot in the 100m backstroke, again in a personal best time. He also won the gold in the 50m freestyle, 100m medley, 50m backstroke and 100m freestyle – all in the disability class. Ashley Buck chipped in with three golds in his age group – he won the 100m backstroke, 100m medley, 50m backstroke – while Olivia Curtin landed gold in the 100m backstroke and 100m freestyle as well as earning silver medals in the 50m backstroke and 50m freestyle.

■ A small contingent of Newmarket swimmers competed at Thetford, producing some good performances for the first away competition of the new season. Molly Duncan made her open debut and those obtaining top-three places were Beth Sadler (gold), John-Paul Gilbey (two bronze and two PB's), Jessica Rayner (bronze and three PB's), Sophie Bellwood (bronze and two PB's), Grace Evans (silver and a PB), Kate McGrath (2), Sebastian Munro-Smith (3), Alyx Hatton (2), and Tim Gilbey (1) all recorded personal best times.

>> Rugby union:Silvester spree sparks try romp*>> UNDER-14

Newmarket 63 Woodbridge 10
NEWMARKET brutally dismissed a side who normally give them problems to make a flying start to their season. With their forwards dominating to give the backs time and space, the home side looked capable of scoring every time they had the ball in the first half.

Ciaran Abrahams started the ball rolling before Harry Silvester scored the first of his four tries with a weaving run from the halfway line.

Aiden Curry forcing his way over before Woodbridge scored at the end of the half and added another after Abrahams struck early in the second half.

Silvester's third and fourth tries, plus touch downs for Max McKrill, who converted all the tries, and Sam Wade rounded off the romp.

>> UNDER-15

Woodbridge 22 Newmarket 17
DESPITE having several unavailabilities, Newmarket put up stiff resistance before losing by a try. A lack of match fitness at key moments contributed to their downfall, although officials felt the game gave them a decent platform on which to build.

The tries came from Richard Phillips, Ben May and Alex Simms with Ben Bowers adding the conversion.

>> Speedway:Heeps booster for Tigers final bid

MILDENHALL Fen Tigers' Aussie star Cameron Heeps has been declared fit, and will return to the line-up for Sunday's National League Knockout Cup final, first leg against Stoke Potters at West Row (4.30pm).

The 15-year-old, who has roared to the top of the Tigers' averages, has recovered from the broken wrist he suffered in a fall at the Isle of Wight last month. He reported no ill effects after practising at Ipswich last week, and will line up at No 1 for the eagerly-awaited clash.

>> Cricket:Title heartbreak as Mildenhall fall short*>> MARSHALL HATCHICK TWO COUNTIES CHAMPIONSHIP

A SUPERB win over Wivenhoe was not enough to clinch the Division One title for Mildenhall as they missed out on top spot by two points.

Steve Lankester's side did what they needed to do by overcoming Wivenhoe, but news in between the innings that Copdock & Old Ipswichians had beaten Coggeshall meant the second half of the match was a bit of an anti-climax.

Wivenhoe won the toss and batted first, making a solid start in the opening overs.

The run-rate eventually slowed down and, as the visitors tried to increase the pace, wickets began to fall.

The innings eventually closed on 192 for 9, Lankester and Tom Westley taking two wickets apiece.

Despite the news of Copdock's triumph, Mildenhall put on a good display in their innings with Westley hitting an entertaining 71.

Alex Reynolds (52 not out) and Ben Shepperson (65 not out) also made solid contributions as the home side reached 195 for the loss of just one wicket.

Exning had a four-wicket win at home to Haverhill, with Tim Catley starring with the bat.

>> Hockey:Matt's the way as Town finish their goal-den build-up*Sudbury II 0 Newmarket 8

MATT Holden ended a long barren spell with four goals as Newmarket continued their goal rush in the countdown to the new season.

After demolishing Thetford 9-1 the previous week, Newmarket expected – and got – a much tougher test against rivals from a higher division, with their ability to move the ball early and at pace pivotal to the overwhelming scoreline.

The only surprise was that it took dominant Town eight minutes to break the deadlock, Alex Andreou putting them ahead. Holden quickly added another, Will Wilson converted a penalty stroke and Holden made it 4-0 just before the break.

Holden completed his hat-trick from a short corner, Chris Leggett capped a fine performance in central midfield with the sixth and Holden added the seventh after being put through by Mike Skelton.

Josh Dawson completed the rout to give Town the perfect boost before they start their Division 4NW campaign at home to Boston at the Leisure Centre (3.30pm).

Haverhill batted first and were all out for 201, Scott Webb top-scoring with 53 as Dan Baigent took 5 for 59 for the hosts.

Liam Bryant (19) and David Atkinson (31) gave Exning a solid start, but it was Catley (63) who proved to be the mainstay as Exning eased to 203 with six wickets down.

Lakenheath's Division Two match at Brightlingsea fell victim to the weather, but not before some impressive performances with the bat.

Shane Leech (71) and Greg Palmer (40) looked in good form as Lakenheath posted 258 for 7 in their innings. The home side were on 32 for 1 when play was abandoned.

In Division Three, Worlington were 10-wicket winners over Felixstowe. D Stannard claimed 5 for 5 as the visitors were restricted to 96 all out.

Then it was Craig Estlea and Tom Osborn's time to shine as their unbeaten knocks of 47 and 51 respectively guided the home side to 99 for no loss.

Exning II beat Long Melford by 10 wickets in Division Four thanks to Peter Woods' century. Long Melford posted 176 for 8, but Woods' unbeaten 105 and Sam Readman's 54 not out, Exning cruised to 179 without loss.

>> GIBBS DENLEY EAST ANGLIAN LEAGUE

TANWIR Afzal claimed five scalps as Burwell rounded off their campaign on a high note with a seven-wicket win at home to runners-up Great Witchingham.

Afzal and Adam Huckle, who took four wickets, did the bulk of the damage between them as the visitors were bowled out for 121.

Witchingham had been looking good on 101 for 3, only to lose a wicket to the last ball before lunch followed by two more in the first over after the restart.

Frans Bester hit 38 and Peter Richer 37, before Paul Summerskill's unbeaten 27 saw the hosts through to 124 for 3 in reply.

Captain Mark Bissett said he was pleased with Burwell's performance against weakened opposition.

He said: "It was quite a comprehensive win in the end. It was only our third of the season, so it was nice to finish it like that and hopefully it will stand us in good stead for next year."

"We've had the second-season syndrome where it's not as new and exciting for everyone, and maybe we got ideas above our station this year."

"But finishing lower middle of the table isn't a bad effort for a club with our resources."

>> Athletics:Mo helps put Martin in top Gear for race

MARTIN Gear got the ideal boost as he lined up for the Great North Run on Sunday. He was able to shake the hand of the nation's new athletics hero Mo Farah at the start of the world's biggest half-marathon. And that proved to be all the motivation Gear needed to achieve his pre-race target.

The Newmarket Jogger was hoping to record a personal best and he was not disappointed, crossing the line in South Shields in 1hr 22min to finish 210th of the 54,000 starters.

Next of the five Jogger contingent was Jamie Shaw, who had been training for the event all year. And despite an injury-interrupted build-up he clocked 1:27 to finish 307th.

Jason Beeton, who the previous day competed for Joggers in the Round Norfolk Relay, still managed to clock 1:37 while Simon Archer stopped the clock in a personal best 1:45, despite admitting he had not put in as much training as he would have liked. Mary Marsh, the sole representative for the club's women's section, clocked 2:1.

It could be a Red letter day

WITH doubts over ante-post favourite Dare To Dance making the cut for the race, rookie trainer Ed Walker believes Red Gulch has a "great chance" in the Betfred Cambridgeshire at Newmarket on Saturday.

The HQ-based trainer said: "Red Gulch is in great form, and although he has had a long season I think he is still on the crest of a wave and seems to be thriving at the moment."

"We are hoping Dare To Dance misses the cut, in which case I think he has a great chance in what is probably the toughest handicap of the year."

"He is on a steep upward curve at the moment and naturally I am hoping it is not tapering off just yet."

"He is likely to be joined by Riggins in that race who I think is well handicapped at the moment. He was only just over six lengths off a 'should-have-been' Irish Guineas winner in Dubawi Gold in the Celebration Mile and his mark of 98 did not change for that effort."

Only the top 35 are guaranteed a run in the first leg of the big "Autumn Double" and Dare To Dance, trained by Jeremy Nosedá, is 45th on the list.

The three-day meeting starts today (first race 2.10pm) with Shadwell Day tomorrow, which features the Fillies Mile, Joel Stakes and the Oh So Sharp Stakes, starting at 1.15pm.

Betfred Cambridgeshire Day starts at 2.05pm, with the support card to the first of the major autumn handicaps featuring the Cheveley Park Stakes, the Bahrain Sun Chariot Stakes and the Royal Lodge Stakes.

■ Wahylah and Clive Brittain just denied Richard Hannon another big pot with a neck victory over Glee in the £100,000 Tattersalls Millions Fillies' Median Auction Stakes at Newmarket on Saturday.

Brittain's filly (10-1) shed her maiden tag at the third time of asking and showed a nice attitude on the stands rail, as the more experienced Glee challenged down the centre.

Brittain said: "She had a horrible experience when she last ran at the July Course, the box got stuck in traffic and she was spooked by the TV screens, but I have taken my time to bring her back and restore her confidence."

"She is better than the filly that won in the Tattersalls Millions races last year, Masaya, and will probably go for a Listed race somewhere as I would like to keep her at six furlongs."

Weakened Jockeys suffer

FC Clacton 2 Newmarket Tn 1
Ridgions League, Premier Division
A DEPLETED Newmarket side slumped to the bottom of the table on goal difference after Saturday's defeat at Clacton.

Ed Curtis gave them the lead in the 35th minute, and the score remained that way until half time.

An ankle injury to James Lane resulted in him being replaced by youth-team player Christian West before the home side scored twice in the last 15 minutes.

Newmarket, who were at home to Stanway last night (Wednesday), travel to Halstead on Saturday for their FA Vase, second qualifying round tie.

Mildenhall 9 Wisbech Tn 0
Ridgions League, Premier Division
ANDREW Wood hit a hat-trick as Mildenhall hammered eight-man Wisbech on Tuesday.

The visitors had a player sent off on 20 minutes for pulling down Stuart Walker when in on goal and Steve Holder nodded home from a corner soon after. Wisbech were reduced to nine men just before the break after Josh Turner was brought down, and had another player dismissed early in the second half for handling Owen Paynter's shot on the line.

Paynter scored the resulting penalty before the floodgates opened. He added another while Wood grabbed a treble and James McCabe, Dave Werthmann and James Patterson were also on target.

Stanway Rov 3 Mildenhall Tn 0
Ridgions League, Premier Division
CHRISTIAN Appleford put Saturday's defeat down to a failure to adapt to difficult playing conditions.

A difficult first half ended goalless, but in the second half the visitors struggled to make an impact. The first goal arrived on the hour, a second followed with 18 minutes remaining and a third in the 85th minute sealed Mildenhall's fate. Mildenhall are at Gorleston in the second qualifying round of the FA Vase on Saturday.

Back in harness: Arc and Derby winner Workforce and Ryan Moore had a satisfactory workout on Tuesday.

WORKFORCE and Ryan Moore made their first semi-public appearance together since July in a racecourse gallop at Sandown on Tuesday which left connections satisfied ahead of a far more important date just a week and a half away.

Moore has only just returned to riding on the gallops after breaking his thumb and humerus – the bone which runs from the shoulder to the elbow – in a fall at Glorious Goodwood.

He was given the all-clear by a specialist to return to work on Monday, but is not likely to have many more competitive outings before Workforce's attempt to retain the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe on October 2.

Trainer Sir Michael Stoute took his colt to Esher exactly a year ago when he had even more questions to answer, having tarnished a scintillating Derby victory with a very laboured performance in the King George.

Workforce's performance in Ascot's big race was better this year and an excuse emerged for his defeat by Nathaniel – the four-year-old returned to Stoute's stable sore after reportedly being struck into by the ill-fated Rewilding.

Workforce had a good look at Sandown and the ongoing preparations for a classic car auction as he was walked around the paddock with his work companions, Confront and Dux Scholar, for about an hour before Stoute emerged to conduct his gallop.

Confront set off at a good pace from the nine-furlong pole with Moore in second until he moved to the front with a couple of furlongs remaining.

The former champion jockey pushed his mount out with hands and heels to finish about two lengths ahead of the Group Three-placed Dux Scholar, who looked in particularly good health.

"That was a nice, strong piece of work on lovely ground. I'm satisfied with that," said Stoute.

"Dux Scholar kept him honest and he's a little bit fitter than Workforce at home."

Moore seemed positive about his own well-being, as well as that of the horse. "He seemed very well in himself and went about his work fine. I was very happy with him," he said. "Physically

A return to Work keeps Moore happy

I'm in very good shape. The movement's not 100 per cent yet but it's getting there."

■ The Champion Stakes, the centrepiece of the new QIPCO British Champions Day at Ascot on October 15, will be next on the list for William Haggas' Green Destiny.

The 2-1 favourite pounced late to win the Dubai Duty Free Arc Trial at Newbury on Saturday and Haggas confirmed: "He'll probably have a dart at the Champion now."

"My view was that if he could carry a penalty in this race against good horses, he'd be doing well, and we missed the Prix Dollar to give him plenty of time (for the Champion)."

Haggas revealed Dual Group One winner Dancing Rain is also set to run next on QIPCO British Champions Day. The filly, winner of the English and German Oaks, will return from her break to tackle the Pride Stakes, with her main objective for the end of the season a trip to Japan for the Queen Elizabeth II Commemorative Cup in November.

However, riding plans for Deacon Blues in the QIPCO British Champions Sprint are up in the air.

The prolific four-year-old has been partnered to victory twice each this season by Johnny Murtagh and Frankie Dettori, with the latter on board for his impressive success in the Dubai International World Trophy at Newbury on Saturday.

Jacko Fanshawe, wife of trainer James, said: "Both Frankie Dettori and Johnny Murtagh love riding him."

"Johnny has ridden him to win a Wokingham and a Group Three and Frankie has ridden him to win two Group Threes."

"What a great problem to have."

Aussie Davey takes top job

NEW player-coach Alisdair Davey watched Newmarket for the first time as they lost 29-26 to Wyndham in London 3NE.

The Australian, who has been playing in the Sydney Leagues with Lane Cove and Knox Old Boys, will take his first training session tonight, but he was an interested spectator at the weekend.

Davey is a fly-half or full-back although he can play in most positions in the back-line. Newmarket's director of rugby Neil Richardson said: "He has got some quite exciting ideas in the way he coaches and the way he wants to play the game."

"We did have applicants for the post but were determined to hold out for the right individual."

Wyndham went 11-0 in front before tries from Richard Harper and Robbie Holland, and a conversion from Michael Cocks put Newmarket 12-11 ahead.

The visitors responded to take a 16-12 lead at the break, but in the second half the score reached 19-19 after Holland got his second try, which Cocks converted.

Wyndham went back in front 24-19, but Sherard Franklin's touch down was converted by Cocks, only for the visitors to win the game with a try in the last four minutes.
